Director of Ceramics and Clay Modelling Gets Humorous Results

New York, Feb. 9 (CP). — Mrs. Mabel Brady began her seventh year recently as director of ceramics and clay modelling at Haaren High School, convinced the social problems of school children, whether delinquency, maladjustment or "just downright indifference," could best be solved through more classes in art where they would learn to express themselves.

Camp Counsellors Given Advice Upon Material Work

Dr. G. Brock Chisholm of the Social Science Department of the University of Toronto spoke at the Camp Counsellor Training Course of the Margaret Eaton School, Thursday, on "The Human Material with Which We Work." "By the time a child is ten years old," said Dr. Chisholm, "he has already learned and experienced much." By that time his attitudes are fairly well established in the various phases of his personality development. Dr. Chisholm pointed to examples in the realm of ability, the social, metabolism, religion and sex. At camp the child realizes the importance of the group. Here it is necessary for him to adjust his outlook to that of contemporaries rather than of his parents. Attitudes at camp must be sound, reasonable and appeal to the intelligence.

Modern creative dances—grace-ful, rhythmic numbers with the bare-footed dancers in Grecian-type robes—social dancing with "swing," national folk numbers featuring costumes of many lands, and tap dancing with performers in green and white uniforms and neat gym suits were all included in the demonstration of physical education work of the Margaret Eaton School in the gymnasium, 415 Yonge Street, Wednesday evening.

The program, which will be presented again this evening, includes also up-to-date gymnastic work, apparatus exercises, games, and general activities of a school which trains students as teachers of physical education in its two-year course.

Seniors and juniors, fifty-two in all, took part in the modern creative dance numbers, which, along with the pyramids, jump rope and ball-tossing, are the original work of the students.

"La Cucaracha," with variations, was an especially colorful number in which all types of dancing—modern, social, folk and tap versions—were combined. The seniors did a splendid job with their demonstration of Buch fundamental gymnastics. An example of the Bjorksten educational work was given by the junior students. The German folk dances, by the seniors, included the "Ballet Quadrille" and "At the Inn To the Crown."

Juniors provoked much amusement by their interpretation of games and plays for children including "King of the B The "Waltz," music for w composed by Miss Flora ("One Man Went to Mow," lative rhythm, were fea

Beauty for the Boudoir

You're looking for something by way of a gift that will appeal to a feminine heart, you can't do better than to choose garments that will give a feeling of loveliness edged with frivolity.

A flannel housecoat illustrated at the left would be as practical as it is pretty, and a happy addition to any Christmas shopping. It has wide shoulders and a quilted trim around the neckline and the pocket. Comes in light wine, cheer blue, Aloha rose, and navy blue. In sizes 14 to 20. It is priced at $5.95.

Room slippers are always a happy thought and at a price the housewife can afford. The one shown has a Cuban heel, a soft sole and it comes in red, or green kid, or in black patent leather. Price is $1.00.

The dainty bed jacket would be an ideal gift for an invalid for the convalescent . . . or for anyone who likes to read in bed. It is made of fine lacy wool with a wool lining and a fluff of maribou around the neck. Comes in blue, peach or orchid. In sizes small, medium or large. The price is $3.98.

The satin nightie has a matching jacket and both are trimmed with embroidery and lace. This comes in peach only and is priced at $2.98 for the nightie or jacket.

LOCAL ACTIVITIES

"CIRCLE -BAR" FOURTH COLUMN

By J. V. McAree

WITH all respect to the newly appointed Chief Justice of Ontario, who will no doubt confer honor on the post, we think Chief Justices ought not to be appointed that way. It is no discredit to him that he is a Liberal, for the government merely followed immemorial usage in appointing a supporter of the party in power, and politics have rarely soiled our judiciary. What we think unfair is that any lawyer, however distinguished, should be appointed the chief of a court made up of judges of much longer experience. It must tend to bring discredit upon the bench among those who ponder the matter.

He Will Improve.

Judges must improve with experience if not with age, and it may be taken that a few years hence Chief Justice Robertson will be a sounder judge than he is today. Unless it is to be assumed that his learned brethren were a good deal less competent than the new Chief Justice when they were appointed, it must follow that in the matter of judicial experience they are better qualified to be Chief Justice. They ought at least to feel that any of them may earn this promotion.

They Ought to Know.

How Chief Justices ought to be appointed we do not know, but we think it would be easy to improve on the present system. What would be wrong with the members of the court themselves choosing which among them would be first among equals? Why should not each new appointee merely join the court and leave it to his peers to decide whether he ought to be Chief Justice?

Mexico City, Dec. 27.—More than 8,000 peasants at the town of Tantioyuca, State of Vera Cruz, after a parade on Sunday bearing placards asking for full religious freedom, reopened a church that had been closed for eight years.

Worshipping was thus resumed after frequent efforts to reopen the church had failed. Several days ago Catholics had again asked the local authorities for permission to reopen the church and upon refusal the Catholics then opened it, but the mayor forcibly ejected them.

This started the agitation that culminated in Sunday's parade.
